Thanks to British celebrity bakers like Paul Hollywood, making sourdough bread has become very popular. Despite a reputation for being difficult to make, sourdough is actually easy; what it does require though is a sourdough starter, time, and a degree of patience. The effort though is certainly worth it for the slightly, chewy bread with its distinctive 'sour' taste.

This Arlettes recipe was a GBBO technical challenge from Paul Hollywood on the Great British Bake Off Series 6. GBBO stands for Great British Bake Off. The Arlettes recipe is a bit like making puff pastry inside out. With puff pastry the dough incases the butter but in the Arlettes recipe it is the butter which incases the pastry.

Try not to twist the cutter; just press down and then lift up and push out the dough. Re-roll any remaining dough and cut out more scones. Let the scones rest for a few minutes. Brush the tops of the scones with the beaten egg, being careful not to let the egg run down the sides. Bake until golden and well risen, about 15 minutes.

And for once, Paul heavily advises to use an electric mixer because of this. The extra water in the dough turns to steam during the baking process, creating the signature air pockets and open texture. All of this water makes the mix very sloppy.
